

HELP SUPPORT
production of
Flora of North America
By Sponsoring
Botanical Illustrations

The Flora of North America Association (FNAA) coordinates the work of 900+ botanists to synthesize knowledge of the patterns of biodiversity of plants in North America north of Mexico, useful for effective conservation, resource management, and scientific research.

Twenty-two volumes out of 30 are published; our goal is to finish by the end of 2022. Gracing each volume are exquisite and accurate botanical illustrations drawn by professional artists. Every genus and about 1 in 6 species are illustrated. These lovely drawings enhance the technical descriptions and give readers a better idea of the characteristics of each species.

To help support the cost of the illustrations, FNAA is inviting individuals and organizations to sponsor one or more drawing. Acknowledgment is given to sponsors in a special section of the relevant Volume; sponsors receive a high quality print suitable for framing and permission to reuse the image.

FNAA hopes that individuals who love plants, native plant societies, specialty plant societies, garden clubs, and botanical gardens will consider sponsoring one or more illustrations, or that horticultural or other businesses will take advantage of this opportunity to promote their interest in our plants.

Sponsorship for a basic drawing (whole plant and 1—2 details) is $200. Check the FNA website (www.floranorthamerica.org) for volumes under production, listing families and genera to be treated and an order form.
